'Warrawee House' - meaning 'stop here and rest a while'

History tells the story that this magnificent Turner Wood house was constructed in circa 1974. It was originally a quarry where stone from the property was carried to build the Horner's bridge in Coromandel Valley. In its formative years, it was a five star guest house, which has now been transformed into a luxurious family home offering a private and secure escape. An extremely impressive offering and one that deserves serious consideration.
